Pa. Courts Release "Seven Veterans. Seven Stories" Video Series to Honor Veterans

HARRISBURG – In recognition of Veterans Day, the Pennsylvania Courts have released a video series, "Seven Stories. Seven Veterans," honoring several judges and court staff who have served in the nations' military.

"These stories honor the courage and sacrifice of our veterans and their families. Their service defends the freedoms and the justice we hold dear, and many continue to serve our courts and communities with the same dedication," said Chief Justice of Pennsylvania Debra Todd.

"We are proud to share their stories and deeply grateful for their service to our country."

These veterans spoke about why they chose to serve, the experiences that have remained with them and how their military service shaped who they are today. They also share what Veterans Day means to them, a message for those currently serving or considering public service and how service to country connects to service through the courts.

"Serving in the military taught me that duty, discipline and sacrifice are the foundation of any just society. I am honored to take part in this series and to stand alongside fellow veterans whose service continues to inspire me. These stories remind us that those who defended our freedoms often go on to protect them again, in our courts and in our communities," Justice Daniel McCaffery said.

The videos are available here and on the Pa. Courts social media channels including Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and Threads.
